Recently to leave on the 15th, bound to Shanghal, and Curiously enough even here in Pongkong some twelve Chinese coolies were stopped at New Orleans, who stated they had arrived from Cubs and were on their way westward to China. The question as to their right of transit was referred to the Attorney-General having apparently been caught in the centre and for decision, and a Washington telegram, dated the 24th ultimo, says that he has rendered it, but that Acting Secretary BADE-HELLER, of the Treasury Department, to whom it was sent, refuses to make it public. It is understood, however, that the decision play the following programme on the Barrack allows the coolies to proceed to San Francisco Equare this (Friday) evening, commencing at and Francis D'Aquin. as tourists. The Californian Press will no doubt be furious at this decision, because it Innoers establishes a precedent. If coolies permitted to travel westward, they will argue, the same privilege must be extended when they assert that they are to their ultimate port in the States. It is difficult to see how the Attorney-General could, have decided otherwise than he has. The coolies in question were on their way home from the Pearl of the Antilles, and it would have been ungracious and unfriendly to the last degree to have compelled them to travel all round the world to get to China. can only be suggestive, not conclusive.

Let us, however, consider in what respects-China presents the symptoms of a moribund power. On the surface of things there are certain obvious false analogies to be guarded against dirt, disorder, and decay, as they meet the eye of the globetrotter everywhere in China, do not necessarily indicate decadence, unless it be shown that things were better in former times than they are now. It would, therefore, be a misleading comparison, that of the roads, vehicles, and houses in China with the like objects in Europe, for what seems to a stranger squalor or dilapidation, so far as it is normal in the country. has not the moral significance which it would have if found in another stage of civilisation. hall? What the precise value may be of the evidence of decadence afforded by the condition of public works we will not at present discuss.

But there is this remarkable circumstance in connection with China, that somehow or another foreigners seem to be more interested in the country than the Chinese themselves. Foreign explorers have traversed the empire in all directions, and have collected a considerable amount of varied information about it. Has any native THE STANDARD LIFE ASSURANCE official or non-official ever travelled 100 miles for a lie purpose? And out of the mass of information which for eigners have published about China, how much have the chinese ever appropriated to the enrichment of their own knowledge? As perceive in that a ready means of replenishing vernment is so slow in bringing about this reconsiderable body of students a taste for knowledge, as such, the stores accumulated by foreigners will be so increased that the Chinese must ever remain beholden to strangers for information about their own country. And it is just when the appreciation of this kind of knowledge has taken possession of the Chinese mind that they will begin to realize how thoroughly, dependent they are on foreign anthorities for everything that is essential. The true sense of inferiority will then be experienced by them for the first time. Knowledge is power, and the foreigner will be discovered to be in possession of it: for let the awaking Chinese be as long as it is meraly borrowed knowledge it will be as moonlight is to sunlight. Knowledge, indeed, is power, and the Chinese ought to be already aware of the fact. Was it not sheer ignomnce which caused them to give away the whole of North-eastern Manchuria to Ignatiew in 1860? The Authorities probably did not know what the territory was which they were signing away for nothing, which was the more disgraceful in the Manchu princes, seeing it was their own fatherland which was being ceded. It was ignorance also which made Wn Tach'eng surrender the free navigation of the Tumen river. If, then, topographical, geological, and general information about China remain in the possession of foreigners, they must but is of a thoroughly sound nature. THE DECADENCE OF CINNAMON.

In the time of the Dutch monopoly, says the Ceylon Observer of 22nd July, the famous cinnamon of Ceylon, the finest by far produced in the world, and the export of which was restricted to the limit of the ascertained demand, cocasionally realized for firsteless bark a price approaching £1 in money for one pound of bark and even so lately as 1830, in the British period, the average price of Ceylon cinnamon in the might happen through some convulsion in London market was so high as 8s per lb. Our fear of another fiasco is founded on the very circumstance which, curiously enough, Jed & r. Cockburn to hope, although with a good deal of hesitation, for good results. This gentleman is reported as saying :-

"He thought the step that was now being taken a good one and if they did all in their power to prevent the preparation of chips themselves the small proprietors would probably find that it would not pay them, and would cease from scraping." Railway passengers have been known to remurk that the only way to remedy traffic troubles is to let them trouble a director. Something of a like nature has happened in America, which will probably make for abolishing, sooner than was expected, the 30 per cent. duty levied on all works of art entering that country. One of the most ardent Protectionists has just had tangible proof of how this law operates, and in this way. He bought a picture in Paris, for which on importation to New York he paid the 30 per cent. duty. It was then found necessary to send the picture back to Paris for one or two minor altorations. On its return the authorities demanded another 30 per cent. The Protectionist demurred, but he had to pay.

A lady expert writes to us: -The toreador Lagartija, who brought the bull-fight in Paris the other day to such an unexpected conclusion by slaughtering the bull in the Spanish fashion after one or two false strokes, would be accounted but a very sorry performer in his own country. I was once present at a bull-fight in Spain where the matedor failed to kill the buil at the first sword-thrust; and the spectators rose en masse, hissed the man out of the arena, and swarming over the barriers in hundreds, drove the poor brute forth, weak and d see raged as he was from loss of blood, and had aim despa ched by a butcher. So peremptory is a Spanish andience, that the fact that the matador had been somewhat unners d a few minutes previously by seeing his brother gored almost to death by the same bull, was not considered sufficient excuse for the failure of the coup de grace.

When the French Government in 1887 suppressed the bookmakers in favour of the part mutuel or sweepstake system, working under Government control, it was decided that 2 per cent. of all moneys collected on the suburban racecourses should be handed over to charitable objects, to be specified later by the authorities. Since then bookmakers have been allowed to re. turn to the racecourses, while the pari mutual has increased enormously in public favour. The Minister of the Interior has decided that twothirds of the proceeds of the tax collected at Outdoor Relief Fund: This grant, amounting to £38,000 for 20 months, represents a sum of £2,700,000 which has changed hands during the same period on three racecourses alone, not including bookmakers' transactions nor private Excellency Hadji Hassien Ghooly Khan, has left the States in great ire. To a New York Herald representative he thus unbosomed himself :- "I am not influenced by the sally newspapers or their criticisms. You have in America seven millions of coloured people, and there is scarcely a nation on the globe that is not represented; but yet I could not walk on the streets of Washington without being greeted with laughter by the populace. Why was this? Simply because I dared come out in my official raiment. The newspapers take up the same silly babble. Their correspondents describe my ears my nose, and my clothing. You are a great people, and you have made great progress in science and art. I, indeed, like the country. I am charmed with your wisdom; but why have you not better writers! Why are your newspapers mere gossiping machines to do the general tattling business? This is not wise. It is childish. Any child could write as some of

In the fall of that year, when the present King of Sweden and Norway had not yet asconded the throne, he was staying at Pan as the tutional one morning with a single aide-de-camp, approaching him at a mad gallop. As the course these horses was taking would have led them on to the place where nearly all the visitors in Pau were foregathering, there would have probably been considerable loss of life had not the Crown Prince of Sweden, at great personal risk, thrown himself on the maddened steeds as they flew by, and by the exercise of his exceptional strength stopped them in their wild career.
